

I have a degree in communications, and I consider the concentration of ownership of broadcast media to be extremely injurious to the health of our or any other democracy. The airwaves belong to the people--correct?--and it is in the interest of the people to have a wide range of opinion and content available. I strongly urge the FCC NOT to relax any more regulation on concentration of ownership. In fact, the recent relaxation of rules should be reversed. It is very worrisome that Clear Channel has such a monopoly in the radio industry--especially when they sponsor pro-war political demonstrations. I hope that the FCC can see the danger to our democracy that this trend presents!
